Democrats by the thousands are spoiling for the want of office.

Judge Doolittle won't take his eye off the St. Petersburg mission.

Morrison is beaten in Illinois, but that doesn't elect General Logan.

It is whispered around Madison that the agricultural college bill will be defeated.

Mr. McCulloch, late secretary of the treasury, is authority for the statement that there will be no change at present in the financial policy of the government

Colonel Vilas will have more appointments under his control than any other man in the cabinet. He has the appointment of nearly 48,000 postmasters, and the president 2,823.

The most sensible elopement which has taken place for a long time, was in Ohio last Friday. It wasn't a rich girl with a coachman, but a rich young man with a poor young woman.

When President Arthur left the white house after the luncheon given Wednesday night the crowd gave "three cheers for the most patient, conservative, and best President the white house has ever seen."

The senate committee has decided to cut down the university appropriation to $150,000, striking out the amounts proposed for building a gymnasium, armory, and chemical labratory. All of which is a very wise thing to do. Because republican economy has put several hundred thousand dollars in the treasury, that is no reason why the money should be squandered.

The other day the St. Paul Pioneer Press had this to say about the appointment of Colonel Vilas: The Wisconsin assembly unanimously adopted resolutions congratulating President Cleveland on the good taste displayed on the selection of Col. Vilas as his postmaster-general. Up to the hour of going to press we have not heard of any like resolutions being passed by the New York legislature relative to the choice made for secretary of the treasury.

Ex-President Arthur, who less than eight years ago was turned out of office for inefficiency, will take up his law practice and the race for the senate to succeed Miller. Mr. Arthur wants more public life.—Sunday Telegraph.

The Sunday Telegraph should stick to the truth. Mr. Arthur was never turned out of office for inefficiency, and because the Sunday Telegraph has a grudge against the ex-president, it should not go out of its way to do him an injustice by making a statement in which there is no truth.

President Cleveland promises to inaugurate one reform. He proposes to adhere to the strict spirit of the clause in the platform of the democratic party which stated that federal offices in the territories would be filled by residents of the territories. "Not a man," said he, "will be sent from other states or territories to fill your offices." There is considerable sense in that idea, and the republicans should have adopted it long ago.

They have a gentleman's club down in New York city, of which the great orator General Stewart L. Woodford, is a member, and the other evening they discussed the topic. "How shall we train our girls?" After discussing the subject in a general way and advancing many ideas as to how the health and manners of the girls might be improved if the fathers had their way, it was wisely agreed that the girls generally learned how to take care of themselves, and when they reached the marriageable age were perfectly competent to take the management of not only their fathers, but all their gentlemen friends, and proceed to train them in their own way.

The condition of business in the assembly up to the adjournment on Saturday was as follows:

Assembly bills in the hands of standing committees	230
Assembly bills in the hands of select committees	29
Assembly bills in the hands of select committees of one and not reported as required by resolution No. 16 A	41
Assembly bills indefinitely postponed	67
Assembly bills passed the assembly	107
Of the 107 above named there have passed the senate	41
Assembly bills ordered engrossed and not yet reported by the committee on bill on third reading	78
Assembly bills on calendar for Monday evening, March 9th	52
Assembly bills laid over and special order	8
Total	629

A final adjournment will not likely be reached before the first of April.

There is some interest in the following item: "Foremost among the persistent place-hunters at Washington is Wisconsin's Thad. Pound. During his independent campaign, it will be remembered, Thaddeus professed to work only from motives of purest patriotism; he withered with his righteous scorn every one who even timidly intimated that he might be working for loaves and fishes." No one in Wisconsin who knew Thad had any doubt as to his motives in deserting Blaine and supporting Cleveland. Had Garfield or Arthur given him an office, or had he been renominated for congress, he would not have been among the independents. Thad's patriotism is based on the amount of spoils he is favored with.

The two prominent Brooklyn divines who were united in the effort to defeat Mr. Blaine last fall, do not now agree on the personnel of President Cleveland's cabinet. Mr Talmage has said, "There will be men in the cabinet who would not make decent scavengers in hell". Mr. Beecher thinks quite differently, for on Saturday he said, "I believe it to be as able a cabinet as has been appointed in my day, and I have no exception to make to any one in it. I think very highly of Mr. Bayard, and very highly of Mr. Lamar. Vilas will turn out everything that we could desire. I believe Whitney to be a very bright man. He will add much strength to the cabinet. I have a great deal of confidence in Mr. Manning. I believe that he will prove himself to be a very sound, practical, business man."

It was only a short time ago that Mr. Dan Manning talked pretty loud as to what he would do in bringing to light corruption in the treasury department. That is all right. If there has been corruption there we hope Dan Manning will hunt it up and let the public see it. But in the meantime suppose the public demand some of Dan Manning's corruption exposed while a member of the Tweed ring in 1871? Before he begins to brag about what he will do with republican corruption, wouldn't it be well for Dan Manning to explain how it was that he, as publisher of the Albany Argus, and a supporter of the Tweed ring, got from the ring $884,500 in two years for a mighty little printing. Will he also rise and explain before he begins to unearth republican corruption, what kind of printing he did, for the Tweed ring, which in less than six years amounted to $678,450? These are questions in which the public has some interest.

A Washington dispatch says that there is going to be a lively fight made against Wisconsin postmasters, and that so far as it is possible, they will effectually cleaned out. Postmaster General Vilas has been given information of many cases where postmasters were "bitter and offensive" partisans. The postmaster at Milwaukee will fall early in the fight. Mr. Bryant at Madison, will stay in. He is a prominent G. A. R. man, and first brought Mr. Vilas into prominence as an orator, besides being a brother of Colonel Vilas' former law partner. So the social relations of General Bryant and Colonel Vilas will count more than politics in this case. Coming nearer home; if this is going to be a "business man's administration" and postmasters shall not be removed unless for good cause shown, then we presume Mr. Richardson, like General Bryant, will stay in until his term expires. President Cleveland has given the country to understand that he would not remove postmasters and certain other republican officials except for a failure to properly discharge their duties, but will allow their commissions to expire and then appoint democrats to fill the places. If this be the policy of the administration, what is the use of the democrats getting into a wrangle over the Janesville postoffice? The office has always been well managed, but we are assured that its affairs were never better administered than they are at present. Then according to Mr. Cleveland's policy, why do the democrats expect a change?

JUDGE TAYLOR'S CALL.

Members of the legislature, county officers and members of the bar, have signed a call to Judge Taylor to become a candidate for re-election to the supreme bench. The call is signed by men of both parties, though in Rock county it will be seen that the signers are chiefly republicans, the democrats, in some instances, reserving their right to support Mr. L. M. Vilas. But the call to Judge Taylor throughout the state is such a formidable one that his election is placed beyond the possibility of a doubt.

The call of the bar is as follows:

To the Hon. David Taylor—The undersigned members of the bar of Wisconsin, having observed your career on the supreme bench of this state during the last seven years, take pleasure in expressing to you their approval of your judicial conduct. Recognizing your learning in the law, experience upon the bench and untiring industry and eminent fitness for the duties of the judicial office, we, the members of this bar, irrespective of party, hereby request you to be a candidate for re-election to the office which you now hold.

This is signed by the following members of the bar of Rock county, which gives Judge Taylor a very strong endorsement:

Judge John R. Bennett, J. W. Sale, A. A. Jackson, Wm. Street, H. McElroy, Wilson Lane, H. A. Patterson, John M. Whitehead, Edwin F. Carpenter, Emmett D. McGowan, M. M. Phelps, A. C. Bates, J. H. Bates, John Nichols, B. B. Eldredge, Wm. Ruger, H. H. Blanchard, M. S. Prichard, Morris M. Bostwick, Henry C. Smith, M. G. Jeffries, Ogden H. Fethers, Edward M. Hyzer, Wm. G. Wheeler, Amos P. Prichard, Angie J. King, L. F. Patten, John Menzies, A. D. Wickham, W. F. Warren, B. F. Dunwiddie, Chas. E. Pierce, S. J. Todd, John C. Reed, W. D. W. Kellogg, O. H. Orton, C. O. Tattershall, J. B. Dow, J. G. Wickham, B. M. Malone.

The county officers of nearly all the counties in the state have also joined in the call which is in the following language:

To the Hon. David Taylor—We the undersigned county officers of the state of Wisconsin, respectfully ask that you become a candidate for the office of associate justice of the supreme court of this state as your own successor.

To this are appended the following names:

George Hanthorn, sheriff; Wm. F. Williams, county clerk; Willis Miles, county treasurer; B. M. Malone, district attorney; Amos P. Prichard, county judge; Wm. G. Wheeler, deputy clerk circuit court; L. F. Patten, municipal judge; John Menzies, clerk municipal court; C. L. Valentine, register of deeds; Edward Ruger, county surveyor.

The members of the legislature, to the number of seventy-eight, united in the call, nearly all of whom were republicans. The response of Judge Taylor accepting the call is as follows:

THE RESPONSE.

To the Above Named Public Officers, Members of the Legislature and of the Bar:

GENTLEMEN: With grateful appreciation of your approval of my conduct and work as one of the justices of the supreme court in the past, as well as of your confidence in my fitness to discharge the duties of that very responsible office in the future, and believing that you express the wishes of a large portion of the bar and of the electors of the state, I readily accede to your request to to become a candidate for re-election. If elected I shall endeavor by faithful work to justify your approval and confidence.

Very respectfully yours,
DAVID TAYLOR.

Madison, Wis., March 6, 1885.

There is no doubt as to Judge Taylor's election. The attempt to elect Mr. Vilas on political grounds will not succeed. The people do not like the judicial question to be thrown into the cess-pool of politics, and in attempting to keep it above party, will elect Judge Taylor.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

THE QUESTION OF PEACE OR WAR A BURNING ONE.

Some Optimistic Views and Some Facts That Are Otherwise—The Times Very Pugnacious—Colliery Horrors—Irish News—Foreign Flashes.

LONDON, March 9.—In spite of the ugly look of things, few seriously expect war with Russia. The bouncing language of the British ministers alone ought to prove this. They speak in a manner indicating that they prefer war rather than allow Russia to go further into Afghanistan. They must, therefore, feel sure that Russia will decline the challenge. Their main reliance in assuming this position lies in the confident hope that Russia is hopelessly embarrassed by want of money, in the czar's insane dread of the Nihilists, and in the incomplete railway communications in Asia. Moreover, Russia must first fight the Afghans, and bitter experience has taught the English that the Afghans are doughty opponents.

Baron de Staal, the Russian ambassador to England, in an interview with your correspondent, said: "Why should Russia and England quarrel? Russia has unexcelled rights where she now is. Russia is perfectly willing that England should, if she so desires, annex Afghanistan. If she should do so, then Russia and England would be neighbors. As neighbors they could better, because jointly, engage in the task of civilizing the vast Asian world."

In an interview between Granville and Musurus Pasha, Turkish ambassador, it is said it was urged on the part of Turkey that England enter into an Anglo-Turkish alliance against Russia. It is declared that Earl Granville, while apparently receiving the proposal with pleasure, declined to make any utterance that could be construed into an indorsement of the offer.

The transports which were on the way to Suakim with the guards and infantry and marines have been detained at Suez on orders from the war office. The ostensible reason for their detention is that the government is awaiting Gen. Greaves' report regarding the water supply at Suakim. The fact is, however, that the transports are awaiting orders as to whether or not they shall proceed to Kurrachee. An immense supply of war stores is going to Kurrachee from Bombay. The threat of a foreign attack almost transforms home affairs. Gladstone's firmness has already half rehabilitated the government. Gordon is almost forgotten.

The Times attitude is exceedingly pugnacious. It urges upon the government the immediate necessity for British occupation and fortification of Herat and says that if Russia wishes to fight she has only to say so. England is not only ready but willing.

The Daily News states there is a constant exchange of dispatches between the English and Russian governments. "Although there is a possible hope for a peaceable settlement the condition of affairs is critical. The British government demands that the Russians retire from the Afghan frontiers, whether put in the form of ultimatum, are final. The choice of peace or war lies in the hands of Russian statesmen. We cannot recede from our position if we would, and if the worst should come it will be the colonies that will be summoned to the rescue and the summons will not be in vain."

The government will temporarily suspend the operations of the factory act, which limits the working hours of the artisans in Woolwich arsenal, in order to enable the arsenal to turn out 2,500,000 cartridges weekly. To do this work will necessitate a large increase in the number of employes as well as the extension of their hour.

Advices from Calcutta state that the Indian railways are prepared to transport thousands of troops to Afghanistan at a day's notice.

It is reported that the Russian government will immediately send 35,000 troops into central Asia, and that the strength of the horse artillery batteries in Turkestan has been increased to six guns each.

A St. Petersburg dispatch to The Times says the Russian government has sent an official offer to England to withdraw the Russians from the hills bordering on Herat, but states it will not retire the troops from the positions occupied at Hera-Rud or Pendjeh, which Russia claims are essential to an effectual hold on the Turkomans. The active scattering of troops concentrated in central Asia is taking place. It is reported troops are moving from Caucasus.

The North German Gazette says the differences between England and Russia are not sufficiently serious to warrant the intervention of a third power.

Lord Hartington says that Gen. Wolseley has telegraphed in reply to a telegram of inquiry from the war office that his eyesight is unimpaired, that his health is excellent, and that he has no intention of going to Cairo, Cyprus or anywhere else until he has first gone to Khartoum.

It is believed at Paris that Count Herbert Bismarck's visit to England is for the purpose of assuring the Conservatives of Prince Bismarck's readiness to support them in case they should, on gaining power, consent fully to Germany's colonial extension policy. This might involve Germany's co-operation with England as against French or Russian interests, and the rumor causes some uneasiness here.

Wales and the Dublin Mayor.

LONDON, March 9.—The prince of Wales, it is now generally believed, will meet with a cold reception upon the occasion of his visit to Dublin next month. Many fear that he will be insulted during his progress through the country. The Nationalists are determined that no respect should be paid the prince, and propose to "teach England that the disloyalists are in the majority in Ireland." Lord Mayor O'Connor explains that he meant in his Phœnix park speech when he said he would take the flag down from the Mansion house when the prince landed, that the flag is only raised over the house when the lord mayor is at home, and he doesn't intend to be "at home" to the prince. He has no intention of identifying himself in any way, personally or officially, with the royal visit.

At Waterford, Ireland, Saturday there was "a regular ruction" between the Royal Irish regiment, under orders for Egypt, and the town police. The soldiers broke into the spirit house and public houses, and treated each other without paying. The police were called on to eject them, but the soldiers refused to go, and at once assaulted the police, with whom, after a short and bloody battle, they literally wiped the streets. Several were badly hurt on both side? At latest advices the Royal Irish were parading the town and levying contributions of whisky from the inhabitants. Troops were summoned from Dublin.

The French Campaign in Tonquin.

PARIS, March 9.—Gen. Brier De L'Isle telegraphs from Tuyen Quang that on March 3 he occupied that town and relieved the French garrison, which had been besieged there. The Chinese fought desperately for eighteen days and made seven assaults upon the town, but being warned of French reinforcements they raised the siege during the night of March 2 and hastily departed.

Advices from Lang Son state that Gen. Negrier is rapidly making his way northward, and has blown up several forts on the Chinese frontier, among them the "Gate of China," one of the strongest fortifications on the boundary line.

The Late Colliery Horrors.

LONDON, March 9.—The loss of life by the explosions in the Karwin, Austrian Silesia, colliery is known to be 147 and may be greater. Only five have been rescued alive.

The Usworth colliery at Sunderland, England, in which the explosion from fire-damp occurred on the 3d inst., imprisoning 150 men, thirty-six of whom were subsequently taken out dead, is now on fire, and further search has been stopped.

The Alleged Paris Fenian Convention.

PARIS, March 9.—The prefect of police announces that an exhaustive inquiry has proved that the Irish convention reported to have been held here is entirely mythical. No such meeting was held, and the dispatches sent broadcast detailing the proceedings of any gathering of Irishmen here were without foundation in fact.

Ovation to the American Prima Donna.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 9.—At her farewell performance in opera here, Miss Van Zandt, the American prima donna, received an extraordinary ovation, being called before the curtain thirty times and overwhelmed with flowers and costly presents. All the members of the imperial family were present.

France Brooding Trouble.

SHANGHAI, March 9.—There is much excitement here over the fact that English and American steamers bound for Tien Tsen have been boarded, their papers examined and cargoes searched by French war vessels.

Millions for a Tunnel Under the Simplon.

GENEVA, March 9.—Ten million dollars have been subscribed to expedite the work of boring a tunnel under the Simplon mountain, for a new railway.

Bismarck Laid Up with Rheumatism.

BERLIN, March 9.—Prince Bismarck is confined to his bed with a severe attack of rheumatism.

Victoria's Thrift.

LONDON, March 9.—The queen has just invested 1,000,000 pounds sterling in ground rents in London.

THE STRIKE ON THE RAIL.

Claims That It Will Be General on All the Gould Roads.

ST. LOUIS, March 9.—The Wabash machinists' strike is still progressing. Seven coaches were destroyed by fire Saturday morning, with a loss of $100,000. The fire is said to be caused by inexperienced hands. Reliable information from Sedalia, Mo., says 400 men struck there Saturday afternoon. This will probably precipitate action here, and the strikers say every principal point of the Gould system will be affected. Perishable freight is refused for all points, and freight of all descriptions, is rapidly blocking at division terminals. The Moberly, Mo., shops are entirely deserted. Men imported to take strikers' places join the strike as fast as they reach here. The "callers" have struck, and this duty is being performed by officials.

NEW ORLEANS, March 9.—Specials from principal points on the Texas Pacific, International and Missouri Pacific roads show little change in the aspect of the strike. The strikers are everywhere firm but orderly, and continue to guard the property of the company. At Marshall the men have rescinded a resolution notifying Superintendent Haynes to leave town, but show no signs of weakness. On the Texas Pacific all the employes except the agents and telegraph operators have been suspended during the strike. Passenger trains are still running regularly, but freights are moved only on the Texas Central. The sidetracks all along the lines are blockaded with cars. Five trains stopped at Marshall Saturday and were side-tracked. The hands in the Texas Pacific shops at Baird struck Friday night. The strike has extended as far east as Shreveport. The strikers still control transportation at Longview, the intersection of the principal roads with the Missouri Pacific. The strike promises to result in litigation between shippers and roads.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., March 9. — Jacob Johann, master mechanic of the Wabash system, publishes an order ordering all former employes who do not go to work by Monday noon to remove their personal effects. The strikers here claim to be in better shape than ever, and laugh at Johann's order.

ATCHISON, Kan., March 9.—A great strike of the employes in the yards and shops of the Missouri Pacific road was arranged to take place at 3 o'clock Saturday, but Superintendent Harriet arrived and told the men that if they would keep at work he would see that they receive their old pay. That was satisfactory, and work was resumed, but when asked to sign a notice to that effect the superintendent refused, and Sunday morning a general strike was commenced. Thirty-one engines were tied up at the round-house and on the adjacent tracks, and but one freight train has been allowed to move. The strike paralyzes business.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 9.—In the view of the numerous strikes on the Wabash system, extending to Fort Wayne and Peru in this state, Mr. Stuart, attorney for the receivers, was in the city Saturday to consult with Judge Woods of the United States court. During the troubles in July, 1877, Judge Gresham, of the federal court, placed on record an order placing the roads under the protection of the United States, and this order has been declared operative at the present time.

AN ABSORBING TOPIC.

THE DIVISION OF THE NATIONAL LOAVES AND FISHES.

Criticising the First Official Change from a Civil Service Standpoint—The New Cabinet Sworn In—Doings at the Capital.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 9.—The Chicago Tribune's correspondent telegraphs his paper: "The nomination of Gen. Black, of Illinois, to be commissioner of pensions is favorably received, so far as Mr. Black himself is concerned, in all the quarters where he is known. Gen. Black undoubtedly will make a good commissioner of pensions, and will be popular with the soldiers, but his appointment is not in the line of civil service reform. The present commissioner of pensions, Col. Clarke, is also a Union soldier with a good record, is a most excellent administrative officer, and, moreover, has the advantage of an experience of many years in the pension office, where he has risen on his own merits, from a subordinate position to the highest place. Col. Clarke is a Republican, but could not be classified as an "offensive partisan." He has, in fact taken no part in politics. He has been so absorbed in his official duties in Washington that he has not generally gone to his legal residence to vote, and two weeks ago, when on the stand before the pensions investigating committee, was not willing to swear that he had any politics. Col. Clarke manifestly could not properly come under the designation of the Cleveland letter to George William Curtis that he is an offensive partisan."

Secretary Lamar has recognized the civil service principle in one act. He has retained Mr. E. P. Hanna as his private secretary. Mr. Hanna has occupied that position under four successive secretaries and is a most invaluable assistant.

Most of the principal officers in the departments have notified their respective chiefs, just installed, that their resignations are at the disposal of their superiors. It is, however, given out for the guidance of members of congress and others interested in securing offices for friends or personally that some time will elapse before any general changes are made.

It is reported that Mr. O. E. Stevenson, of Bloomington, Ills., is to be appointed second assistant postmaster general.

The correspondent of The Chicago Inter Ocean telegraphs: "According to trustworthy reports it will not be long until important changes are made in the treasury department. Both the assistant secretaries are likely to retire this week. Assistant French will probably be succeeded by C. S. Fairchild, of New York, who was formerly attorney general of that state. Mr. Fairchild is highly spoken of. He is an earnest believer in genuine civil service reform, and has long been a worker in the cause. He was a member of the executive committe of the Civil Service association of New York, and is now a member of the board of managers of the city civil service. During the first half of the last session of congress he made a long argument before the committees of the senate and house in favor of the proposition to repeal the four years tenure of office act.

Nearly all the auditors of the treasury and First Comptroller Lawrence will be succeeded as soon as proper men can be selected. No one has come forward as a successor to Treasurer Wyman. The president will doubtless be in no hurry to make a change in this office. Mr. Wyman is a faithful and capable officer and a courteous gentleman, thoroughly equipped and adapted to the place. It is difficult to find a man who can give a $2,000,000 bond, and every man who can give the bond is not equal to the position.

Several colored men are said to be anxious to succeed Register Bruce, and others of this race are in training for the missions to Liberia and Hayti, both of which are now held by colored men.

Ex-Congressman Rogers, of New York, and E. H. Butler, who publishes a daily paper at Mr. Cleveland's home, are desirous of securing an official introduction to Public Printer Rounds, and a couple of Washington Democrats also have their eyes on Mr. Rounds' office. Mr. Rounds is a good officer, but is likely to return to Chicago before many moons have waned.

The Washington papers mention John H. Oberly, of Illinois, as a candidate for assistant secretary of the interior although he has asked for no place. Ex-Congressman Money and Dr. Grover L. Miller are candidates for first assistant postmaster general. The names of Gen. Joseph E. Johnston and ex-Senators Slater and Grover are mentioned in connection with the commissionership of the land office. The Democratic national committee has asked the president to appoint S. Corning Judd, of Chicago, solicitor general.

The senators and the new congressmen from Alabama, after agreeing upon a scheme for the distribution of federal patronage in their state went to the White House and laid it before President Cleveland. He smilingly remarked that they seemed to have forgotten the civil service law, and assured them that he would send a printed copy to each of them.

The River Improvement Question.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 9.—The executive committee on the improvement of western water-ways have issued and mailed an address in which they say: "The discussion upon the appropriations for western water ways, in the river and harbor bill, revealed an opposition in the west which was unexpected. For reasons not made clear, many western congressmen arrayed themselves in opposition to further work in improving our rivers. By their action and neglect the great work has been delayed, and unless vigorous measures are taken on the part of the people interested in cheap water transportation, the work of improving our water-ways will be abandoned or postponed for years. At a meeting of the executive committee, held in this city last January, it was determined by a unanimous vote that the boards of trade and other commercial organizations of the commercial centers of the Mississippi valley states be invited to send delegates to celebrate the 'improvement of the western water-ways day' at the world's industrial and cotton centennial exposition. The management has given the use of Music hall for that purpose, and has designated April 7 and 8 as the days for holding the proposed convention. Those days will be given to a discussion of what measures are necessary to reinstate this work of river improvement. The president of the United States and members of his cabinet, members of the United States senate and house of representatives, governors of states, and mayors of cities are respectfully invited to be present and participate in this celebration."

Swearing in the Secretaries.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 9.—There was a new departure in the capitol Saturday in the matter of swearing in the new secretaries. It has been the practice of Republican cabinet ministers to take the oath before some justice of the peace, or department clerk who hold a commission as notary, and Mr. Lawrenson, a clerk in the postoffice department, who has been there since Andrew Jackson's time and sworn in twenty-two postmaster generals, including Mr. Lawrenson, was nearly "all broke up" when he heard that Mr. Vilas was to be sworn by Justice Field of the United States supreme court.

Justice Field began by administering the oath to Mr. Bayard, and then a procession was formed and each cabinet officer was successively sworn in at department headquarters, the other ministers being witnesses to the act. Four of the officers took the oath early in the day, and Vilas and Lamar were installed later, Mrs. Vilas being present at her husband's induction and sealing the same with a kiss. Mr. Endicott was present at the ceremony in the other departments. The remainder of the day was devoted to getting acquainted with the new heads and bidding farewell to the old ones.

The "Backbone" Grant.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 9.—The issuance of patents to the New Orleans & Pacific railway is causing a good deal of comment. Those who oppose the action of the department in issuing the land patents say that while the president was signing the patents he had before him a petition signed by a number of senators and representatives protesting against the issue. The signers of the petition were Senators Jonas, Morgan, Van Wyck, Hill and Walker and Representatives Lewis, Cobb, Anderson, Henley and Holman. As the protest was ignored its framers feel quite indignant. Van Wyck is of opinion that the matter will require a great deal of explanation to blot out the irregularities hinted at in his resolution of inquiry, while on the other hand friends of Teller say that he had the authority of the administration for his action in the matter, and will very readily make the matter clear to the entire satisfaction of a majority of the senate.

The Crowd That Went to Washington.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 9.—The records of the Baltimore & Potomac railroad show that during inauguration week the road moved into Washington 401 trains, averaging fourteen cars to the train and forty-one persons to the car, from points north, east and west. During the same period there arrived 184 trains from the south, averaging seven cars to the train and fifty-two passengers to the car. Four hundred and twenty-two Pullman cars were handled at Washington by this road during inauguration week. Superintendent Barker says that this is thirteen more cars than the whole number of roads centering at Chicago run into the city during the Democratic and Republican conventions.

Receipts Falling Off.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 9.—The receipts for the eight months of the current fiscal year ending with Feb. 28, shows a falling off of nearly $20,000,000, compared with the corresponding eight months of the preceding fiscal year, which is equal to a monthly average reduction of $2,500,000. In customs the falling off was nearly $13,000,000, and internal revenue over $5,000,000.

The Silver Question.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 9.—The silver men here say that the fight on the silver question at the next session of congress will surpass any contest that can take place on the tariff. They say that the issues are already clearly defined, and that the goldbugs having control of the treasury department will drive silver to the wall if they can.

The Presidential Sunday.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 9.—Sunday was a quiet day at the executive mansion. There were but very few callers. The president, contrary to expectation, did not go to church, but remained in-doors all day. Vice President Hendricks attended morning services at the Ascension Episcopal church.

Endicott's First Official Act.

WASHINGTON CITY, March 9.—The first official act of the new war secretary was the signature of the appointment of Gen. Grant on the retired list, which had been already signed by the president and left by Secretary Lincoln as an act of courtesy to the incoming secretary for him to countersign.

THE RACE ON ROLLERS.

Donovan Gets Over Nearly 1,100 Miles—The Closing Scenes.

NEW YORK, March 9.—The six-days roller race came to an end Saturday night at 10:10 o'clock. The men by that time were pretty well used up. If Boyst had been close enough to make a doubtful and exciting finish Donovan could not have done better than he did. With sunken cheeks of ashy paleness and dilated eyes he rolled on unflinchingly. He had gone 1,000 miles at daylight Saturday morning.

The real weakness of the men became apparent whenever they stopped to rest. Boyst, who appeared not overfatigued when in motion, undertook to do a little backward skating. This caused him to sit down with rather uncomfortable suddenness. Boyst had rolled 1,000 miles behind his heels four minutes before noon. Omelia passed the same high station at 4:37, and Maddocks reached it at 6:30. Then four of the thirty-three starters climbed the 1,000-mile pinnacle hours before the finish.

Following is the score at the finish: Donovan, 1,092; Boyst, 1,045; Omelia, 1,032; Maddocks, 1,000; Schock, 950; Johnson, 895; Allen 859; Calhoun, 850; Mayer, 835; Ward, 825; Walsh, 720; Goodwin, 723; Walton, 701; Robinson, 664; Elkes, 652; Phillips, 652; Cohen, 548.

During the contest Donovan rested 20 hours; Boyst, 27; Omelia, 27; Maddocks, 28; Schock, 31; Johnson, 41; Allen, 29; Calhoun, 55; Meyer, 42; Ward, 42.

The prizes for which the men made this unparalleled race were $500 and a diamond pin valued at $250 for the first man, $250 for second, $150 for third, and $100 for fourth. The managers said that as it was a private enterprise they would not say how the enterprise turned out financially. The general belief is that the receipts exceeded the expenditures.

John Kelly Getting Well Again.

NEW YORK, March 9.—John Kelly is steadily gaining in health. He rides on horseback or drives several miles every day. His digestive organs are slowly recovering their full form, and the insomnia which was so marked a symptom for several months is gradually yielding to treatment. It is probable that he will not take an active part in politics hereafter; he has no wish for office, but will retain his membership in the Tammany society.

Another Foreign Tragedian.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Herr Adolf Sonnenthal, the great German tragedian, arrived here Sunday by the steamer Elbe, and was given a reception at the rooms of the Liederkranz society Sunday evening. Among those present were Henry Irving, Edwin Booth, Lester Wallack and William J. Florence.

Andrew Carnegie, the Scotch millionaire, of Pittsburg, applied to the Reform club of London for membership, and was pitilessly blackballed.

Malpractice or Mistake.

ST. LOUIS, March 7.—A burial certificate signed by Dr. D. C. Franklin, of 2348 Olive street, was presented to the health office about 1 o'clock Friday afternoon for the burial of Mrs. Marion League. The cause of her death being stated as disease of the esophagus and intestines from creosote poisoning. The health commissioner refused to sign it and notified the coroner, who proceeded at once to 1015 North Sixth street, where the remains were found. The coroner stopped funeral proceedings until he could learn the facts concerning the death of Mrs. League. The husband of the deceased stated that his wife, on the 26th day of December, 1883, complained of constipation of the bowels, and called in Dr. Thomas Holland. He left two prescriptions which she took. They contained creosote and she constantly cried out that her inside was burned out. Dr. Franklin was called in and declared that she had been poisoned by creosote. For this he treated her, but she continued to sink until Thursday morning when she passed away. Dr. Holland admits having prescribed creosote and claims that the mistake lies with the druggist, Raboteau & Co., in not filling it properly. The inquest is in progress.

Proposed Canadian Anti-Dynamite Law.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 7.—Sir Alexander Campbell's anti-dynamite bill which was introduced in parliament Friday, provides that persons causing unlawfully an explosion likely to endanger life, or causing injury to property whether such injury is intended or not, shall be guilty of felony, and liable to imprisonment for life. Persons who conspire to cause an explosion or have in possession explosive substances, wherewith to endanger life, shall be liable to fourteen years imprisonment. Persons found with explosive machines or substances in their possession, under suspicious circumstances, shall be liable to imprisonment for seven years. The attorney general of the province where an explosion occurs, and justices of the peace, may issue warrants to search where explosives may be suspected to be kept or stored.

BOUND TO BE RICH,

AND BEGAN BY STEALING OVER ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND.

How Peleg Kenyon Laid the Foundation of a Fortune, Lived Alone, Despised, and Died Gloating Over His Ill-Gotten Wealth.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 7.—Peleg Kenyon, aged 60, recently died in Griswold, a rural manufacturing village in the eastern part of this state, leaving property worth, it is estimated, $750,000. Kenyon was a bachelor, lank, keen-eyed and bald, and a typical Yankee. He died a miserable old miser. The boast of his life was that he started a machinist at 17 and at 21 was worth $75,000.

Peleg Kenyon's mother was a hard-fisted Yankee woman, honest but ambitious. When her son left the old farm, more than two score years ago, just as the plowing for oats was about to begin, to seek his fortune in a Boston machine-shop, the widow was mad at him. She took hold of the plow-handles herself, and told Peleg never to come back until he had made his pile. He finally got a position as watchman at Henry Henderson's large warehouse. One Saturday afternoon the house received after banking hours a cash payment of $105,000 for a crop of molasses. The money was placed in the cash-box in the office for safety. The safe was both fire and burglar-proof, and the presence of a trusty watchman in the building convinced Mr. Henderson that the great packages of bills would be as secure there as anywhere. That night, as soon as Kenyon was left alone, he opened the safe and the cash box, stuffed the bills into his pockets, locked the doors behind him, walked to the depot, and took the evening train to Putnam, Conn. At 12 o'clock that night he drove up to the old homestead in Griswold. At 5 the next morning he was at the Putnam depot again, but minus the money. Sunday night he returned his duties as night watchman in the warehouses of Henry Henderson. He was arrested on suspicion, but nothing could be proved against him. One day Mr. Henderson walked into his cell and said: "Peleg, this thing has gone on long enough. You stole that money."

"Well, what if I did?" coolly replied Peleg.

"What if you did! you scoundrel; why, I'll send you to prison for life."

"No, you won't, Mr. Henderson. Massachusetts law provides seven years only for the man who steals from his employer," Peleg replied laughingly.

"What do you mean?" said Mr. Henderson.

"I can't earn $100,000 in seven years, Mr. Henderson, and you know I'm bound to be a rich man. Now, I have got that much and after I've been punished seven years for taking it it's mine; don't you see?"

The merchant was baffled. For $30,000 Mr. Henderson finally signed an instrument putting Kenyon out of harm's way with the lion's share of the money in his pockets. Kenyon was released, and went at once to Griswold, crawled under the horse-stable in the red barn at the old homestead, and drew forth the bundle of $105,000 in bills intact. He counted out $75,000, and going into the house, said to his mother: "Mary, there's my pile."

"No good will come of it, my son," she sternly responded.

In ten years he had doubled and trebled his fortune, but in the meantime his mother had died, as had all his near relatives. He went back to the old farm in Griswold, and made it the fairest in the land. But the honest country people held aloof from him and for the rest of his life Peleg Kenyon lived alone, a soured and rapidly-aging man, with no enjoyment, save the piling up and gloating over his ill-gotten wealth. He was found dead alone, in front of his treasure-chest, sitting upright in his chair.

GATHERED IN THE SPORTS.

A Cocking Main Rudely Interrupted by the Laws Minions.

CHICAGO, Ills., March 9.—Jerry Monroe took a party of fifty or more Chicago sports out to Blue Island Saturday night, to witness a cocking main. There they were joined by a large delegation from Joliet and surrounding towns, numbering about 100, and repairing to an unoccupied mill the main began. The peaceful citizens of Blue Island, however, were aroused and telegraphed to Chicago for the police. A squad of twenty men were at once dispatched by special train over the Rock Island road, and reaching Blue Island at 1 o'clock Sunday morning, surrounded the mill and began roping in their men. About 100 arrests were made, including Paddy Ryan, Tom Coffee, George Berz, well-known sports, and about a dozen leading citizens of Chicago. There was a great scramble to avoid arrest. One man jumped from a second story window and broke a limb. Another slid down a grain chute, stuck fast, and when sawed out was nearly smothered. Half the prisoners were brought to this city—each man being compelled to pay his fare by train—and the balance are detained at Blue Island.

In Danger of Being Lynched.

AKRON, Ohio, March 9.—The jury in the case of Watt Henry, the wife murderer who has been on trial for a week past, returned a verdict Saturday evening of murder in the second degree. The bloody butchery was admitted, but premeditation could not be established. Public sentiment is terribly against Henry, and there is open talk of lynching him. In the preliminary trial the crowd was moving to lynch him when the building gave way. Saturday, while the prosecutor pictured the bloody scene of the murder, the crowd thundered their indignation, and it is said was on the point of taking him from the court-room to hang him when an alarm of fire was sounded near by, diverting the attention of the infuriated crowd.

The Iowa State Auditor Trouble.

DES MOINES, Iowa, March 9.—The governor in an interview with a correspondent stated that he cherished no ill feeling toward Auditor Brown, but was informed by the state treasurer that Brown's monthly payments were not accompanied by itemized statements. The governor will not wait for the courts to settle the issue, but intends to make the auditor an interloper by canceling his old bond and refusing to approve the new one.

Railway Collision.

LAWRENCE, Kan., March 9.—A disastrous collision between freight trains occurred two miles east of this place on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe road Sunday morning. Both engines and a dozen cars were demolished. Engineer Meyers was badly injured. The loss will reach $100,000.

GEN. GRANT STEADILY SINKING.

His Condition at Latest Accounts—Dying in the Literary Harness.

NEW YORK, March 9.—Gen. Grant did not rally Saturday, as his friends hoped he would. Dr. J. H. Douglas, the surgeon, who is in almost hourly attendance on Gen. Grant, said Saturday night that he was very weak and feeble. He would not say whether or not the general had lost ground during the past week. There is little doubt, however, that Gen. Grant is sinking rapidly. His disease is a wasting one, and gives no chance for recuperation. His appetite is poor, and he takes small quantities of soft food at frequent intervals only by an effort of his will. He passed another bad night, Friday night, and awoke unrefreshed. The dismal weather, Saturday, had a very depressing effect on him. It is not likely that the general can last many days longer.

Dr. Douglas said Sunday night: "The general had a sleepless night Saturday night, but about 5 a. m. Sunday he fell asleep and sleep until 11 o'clock, so his condition is more favorable now; in fact he is better than he has been for several days past. He suffers no pain and is in better spirits."

The old soldier is exerting himself to get his war reminiscences written out before death stops his pen. He had more ease from pain during the week than was anticipated, and was able to work several hours every day. In order to hasten the composition an amanuensis was employed—a woman who could use a typewriter as rapidly as he would be likely to dictate—but his constitutional lack of fluency was aggravated by the unusual process, and it was soon found also that the use of his voice, even in a whisper, brought on inflammation and swelling in his diseased throat. Therefore he returned to pen and ink. He writes slowly, his average rate being only about 500 words an hour, and that is lowered by frequent meditation. He has never practiced at composition for publication, and it comes awkward. The first volume of the proposed work has been edited thoroughly by an expert, whose duty, however, was limited to a verbal and grammatical revision. He was ordered not to alter the meanings, except on consultation. The second volume is about half done, but Grant has made copious notes for the remainder, so that they could be written out after his death if necessary.

It was almost arranged that the work would be published by The Century company, but before a contract was made Mark Twain, who is a member of the publishing firm of Charles Webster & Co., showed the general that a great deal more money could be made for his family if he accepted an offer of Mark's firm to take Jesse Grant into partnership, and the general went into the scheme, as, besides promising greater returns for his labor, it provided a business for his son. The profit if a large edition is sold will be treble the royalty offered by The Century company.

Father Curtis on Dynamite.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 9.—In the course of his sermon at the Roman Catholic cathedral Sunday morning Father Curtis took occasion to denounce the methods of the dynamiters in their attempts to blow up public buildings in England. "Irishmen," said he, "calling it patriotism, are to-day rejoicing at the dangers which surround England. In their prayers to God they implore Him to give success to their nefarious plots against the mother country. They would scorn to do an injury to an individual Englishman, but to blow up England's public buildings is, in their eyes, no sin at all." He closed by asking Roman Catholic newspapers throughout the country, whose editorial columns are teeming with articles commending dynamite and nihilism, how they are to reconcile their position with the divine injunction, "Love your neighbor as yourself."

Went Gunning for Judges.

BERNE, March 7.—The following are the particulars of an attempt to kill Judge Dumur, while presiding over the police tribunal at Lausanne Friday. M. Chavan, defendant in the case which was being tried, took offense at one of the judge's rulings, and suddenly springing to his feet, drew a revolver and discharged it full at M. Dumur, the bullet barely missing its mark. As M. Chavan fired, M. Goardon, clerk of the court, and M. Blanchard, an usher, sprang upon him, but were too late to prevent the shot being fired. In the struggle for possession of the revolver, more shots were fired, and both Goardon and Blanchard were severely wounded. After M. Chavan had been overpowered and placed under arrest, he became wild with rage, and swore that he had come into court prepared to kill not only the presiding judge, but the other justices sitting with him. Before Chavan was overpowered, he was beaten on the head until insensible with the revolver which had been wrenched from his hand.

MICHIGAN LOGGERS.

THE REGULAR WORK OF A LOGGING CAMP AMONG THE PINES.

Choppers, Sawyers, "Swampers" and "Skidders"—The "Sprinkler" at Work—A Monster Sleigh—"A Tight Place"—Loss of Life.

[Charles Ellis in The Current.]

First, the roads are located and graded, for this is a business that utterly refuses to move on bad roads. Next, the "Skidways," or raised bottoms upon which the logs are to be piled preparatory to loading them upon the sleighs later in the season, are prepared. Then, the work of logging begins. Crews or gangs of men, three in each; one chopper, who selects and notches the trees that are to be felled, and measures and trims them up when they are down, and two sawyers, who fell the trees and cut the logs off, take the lead. These are followed by the "swampers," who, with well-trained horses, drag the logs to the skidways, where the "skidders" take charge of them, and, with the aid of the horses, pile them in great roof-shaped piles sometimes thirty feet high. At the same time a gang of men is at work on the road from camp to river, whether the logs are to be transported in winter. This is a very important part of the labor, as the success of the winter's work depends upon the ability to do a great deal of hauling in a short time. Hills must be avoided, and consequently the road will follow the low land, and this must run through swamps that are sometimes very difficult to get over. When the cold weather sets in men are put into such swamps to tramp the surface into a mire, as in that state it freezes more readily than when covered with grass, roots and water.

As soon as the road will bear a team, a gang of men is sent out at night to work upon it with "the sprinkler." This is a box built upon logging sleighs for the purpose of hauling water over the roads and sprinkling the track at each side in which the sleigh runners move. The water soon freezes, and thus a road of ice is formed little by little that will last for weeks after snow roads have entirely disappeared. I have seen a sprinkler at work that weighed, when loaded, thirteen tons, and that was drawn by one pair of horses; and I have heard lumbermen say that for an all-winter work of cutting and hauling, they would rather have no snow at all, preferring to make their roads in this way, entirely of ice. Hauling begins with the freezing of the swamps, generally about the middle of December. Then the piles of logs by the roadside are broken down. This work is often full of danger to limb and life of those engaged in it, and only the strongest and most skillful cant-hook men are selected for loaders. Snow and rain have frozen upon the logs, and they "stick." The logs are not taken down from the top of the pile, but broken out from the bottom. Where they are frozen together you will sometimes see them worked out until a sheer front of twenty or thirty feet is presented, at the bottom of which the men must expose themselves to break out the bottom log and bring the whole pile down. I have seen such a pile come down with a leap that sent great logs flying like sticks clear out over the sleigh, filling the road full.

The sleigh is in itself a curiosity to one whose mental image of a sleigh is the light dashaway cutter of the fashionable drive. This monster of the woods has four runners, measures about thirty feet over all, is from eight to nine feet beam, weighs, when fully equipped 3,500 pounds, and has a carrying capacity of all you can pile on—amounting sometimes to twelve and fourteen tons—a load that a pair of these great horses, trained to camp work, will walk away with easily. In our camp the logs are skidded along a road that has a light down-grade that finally reaches bottom with a somewhat abrupt pitch that rises to about an equal height on the opposite side. If a team were to hold back its load coming down this hill, and were to stop and take breath at the bottom before taking the up-hill it would never get its load to the top. The load must go up by virtue of the law of gravity, so-called; the team and load are a pendulum; the momentum which it takes on coming down to the centre will carry it up on the other side.

Old campers know all about the trick of getting over such a grade; and it is a pretty sight to see one of them perched on the top of a huge load, sometimes six feet above his team, come down that hill with the horses gradually increasing their speed, until by the time they are crossing the bottom they are going like the wind, and so continue up the opposite side, until the load has gradually exhausted its momentum, and they come to a walk and take up the slack of the traces just in time to keep the load in motion over the crown of the hill. Sometimes, too, it is amusing to see a "mossback," that is, a farm team and teamster, new to the business, come down that hill with a load. The first time they generally get stuck. Then they will watch a camper do it, and their success will depend on their power of imitation. The camp teamster is not noisy to his team, save when it gets into "a tight place," and then he bursts his mouth over it like a thunderclap. Occasionally a team fails to do all that is expected of it, and then the teamster gets angry, and abuses the almost always willing and grand horses until sometimes I, too, become indignant, and get away where I cannot see what I cannot prevent.

Many a man has lost his life by an accident in the logging camps. In Michigan the number of deaths by such means reaches from sixty to seventy in a season. The teamsters are the least exposed among the men, although to an observer unfamiliar with the dangers of such a place, they seem to be most exposed. But driving team is terribly cold work. People who get up at 8 o'clock and do their work in warm rooms have but a feeble conception of what it is to get up and out to work two hours before daylight, with the mercury column putting on airs at 20 degrees below zero! On such a morning the atmosphere is so penetrating that it makes me dizzy. I seem to be drunk on oxygen, and I wonder if it isn't this cheap method of getting "set up" that makes these wild fellows love this life so well.

AN EXPLOSIVE CONVOY

UPS AND DOWNS ON BOARD A MISSISSIPPI POWDER TRANSPORT.

Peppered by a Four-Gun Battery on Shore—Within an Inch of Kingdom Come—Capabilities of an "Infernal Machine's" "Platoon."

[Ex-Paymaster Pearson in Philadelphia Times.]

We started for Vicksburg in company with the Jacob Strader, the largest steamboat on the lower river. The Strader was burthened with thousands of tons of powder and fixed ammunition for the army. Together we formed, perhaps, the most explosive convoy that ever sailed the Mississippi. The holds were crammed with powder and percussion shell; powder was piled on the main decks aft the furnaces and covered with tarpaulins to keep out the sparks. Lower and upper guards and cabins were stacked with cartridges for small arms.

As we glided down stream Capt. Birch called me to the upper deck and introduced me to the queerest looking "infernal machine" we had yet encountered. Belligerent cranks were constantly bringing to the naval authorities some new invention for destruction of the human species "to be tried." As for four years the Confederate states furnished subjects for these experiments, they should be entitled to a bill in equity against the inventors for a share of the profits.

This thing placed in charge of Capt. Birch was a sort of infantry platoon on wheels—a rank of rifle-barrels ranged parallel and mounted like a boat howitzer. By percussion the whole platoon was simultaneously discharged in "one time and one motion." Birch told me he had reason to fear that the Confederates were aware of the coming of our convoy, and that somewhere on the route to Vicksburg they might waylay us and try to blow us up. In case opportunity offered he wished me to take charge of the "infernal machine" and report upon its capabilities. We charged the "platoon" and blazed away over the river a few times to get elevation and range; then loaded and left it ready for emergency.

Next morning about 7 o'clock, as we were steaming down the river, I had just rolled over for another snooze, when I was aroused by a crash through the sides of the ship, together with a rattling report of light artillery. In a moment came a kick at my door, with the words: "Halloo! Get up! We're in a fight!" I bounced out, and being ready harnessed, excepting coat and boots, ran for the hurricane deck and "infernal machine." We were passing through "Cypress Bend," and things around looked interesting.

On shore, abreast the narrowest of the channel, was a four-gun battery of field pieces, manned by about 200 Confederates, all peppering away like a fourth of July. About 100 yards ahead was the Strader. She had been the target of the first volley and escaped damage. The Gen. Lyon came next, and here the enemy had better luck, putting all four of the shot of their second volley through us. It is scarcely necessary to mention that our cargo was unscathed. Had any part of it been struck this chapter would have been written by somebody else.

Next after the Lyon came the transport New Kentucky, loaded with troops and mules. The third round of the battery blew her up. She drifted and lodged upon a sand bar and lay there helpless, enveloped in a cloud of steam, while the battery poured shot into her as fast as the guns could be served. The men not busy with the field-pieces amused themselves with small arms. Many were perched in the small trees astraddle of the limbs, whence they kept up a lively shower of buckshot and little bullets. But they fired too high.

Alongside our lee was the gunboat Signal. Capt. Birch suggested that she engage the battery and rescue the disabled transport, which was being roughly treated. The commander of the Signal objected that, being a "tin-clad," he could not go within range without endangering his own boilers.

"If you won't do it, said Birch, "then, by G—, I will!"

We rounded to and went for the battery. The long thirty-two pounder on the forecastle was in charge of an old man-of-wars-man and gunner, Acting Ensign John Powell. As we neared the Confederates he sent a shell which struck in the river bank beneath them. Another quickly followed and burst in the midst of the convocation around the guns. It caused a "scatterment" and they began to limber up.

Meanwhile the "infernal machine" was tested. Aimed into the tree tops, it fired a whole platoon. I had squatted down behind it to aim, and, intent on the effect of the discharge, forgot to keep clear of the recoil. I picked myself up with a sore head, for which I was compensated by witnessing the comical style in which the occupants of the tree tops tumbled out. It reminded me of old-time black-bird shooting. The platoon was again got into line of battle and fired another blizzard with good effect, while the old thirty-two pounder put in some more notices to quit, so persuasive that our foes were soon in full retreat across the bend, affectionately followed by our kind adieux so long as we could see them.

The steamer New Kentucky was rescued and taken in tow. It then behooved us to hasten on and pass the other side of the bend before the battery reached it to intercept us. Since we had force enough it would, perhaps, have been better and safer to have landed and captured the guns than to risk their bad marksmanship again. Fortunately we got ahead of them and escaped a repetition of their attentions.

One of the party of hostiles was subsequently captured, and from him we learned that the shell so appositely planted among them from the Lyon killed and wounded sixteen men of the battery. To how much credit the "infernal machine" was entitled is uncertain. Judging by the infernal energy with which it kicked over its engineer it ought to have slaughtered all there was left.

Our loss was trifling, our escape miraculous. Of the shots which struck the Lyon two passed through the flues close in front, the others just behind her boilers. One actually knocked off the button of the steam gauge. A divergence of one inch, either way, would have been destruction to the entire convoy. It seemed as if Providence had purposed an example of "upon what slender threads hang everlasting things." The loss of those cargoes of ammunition might have materially changed results at Vicksburg. Had our assailants succeeded in blowing us up it would have been a rich joke on themselves. We were not thirty yards distant when they struck us, and had we "gone off" there would not have been a grease spot left of them.

Just as Well.

STRIKERS TAKE CHARGE.

TWO THOUSAND MEN IDLE ON GOULD'S TEXAS LINES.

No Freight Trains Permitted to Run by the Strikers—The Trouble Extending in Every Direction—Citizens Promise Aid.

DALLAS, Tex., March 7.—The Gould system strike is spreading in every direction. There are at Fort Worth, Denison, Marshall, Palestine and Long View fully 1,000 strikers, and equally as many more men necessarily suspended at small intermediate stations whose work cannot be utilized to this company's benefit while the strike lasts. Everything at Dallas in the way of freight traffic by the Gould lines is suspended. At Denison, Friday, over 200 men quit work, appointed committees to guard and protect the railroad buildings and property, and announced that nothing but mail-cars should run. It was discovered that freight trains were being run across Red river into Indian territory by yard-engines, and thence north by the mogul freight engines. The strikers took possession of the yard-engines, locked them up, and thus suspended all operations. The citizens are in sympathy with the men, and promise them aid. At Marshall the strikers waited upon Mr. Haynes, superintendent of motive power, accused him of being, through treachery, the cause of their troubles, and announced that if, within twenty-four hours, he did not straighten things, they would not be responsible for what might happen to him. The master mechanic, who is also accused of having betrayed the men under his authority, has had to leave the town. A squad of police and the deputy sheriffs Friday escorted one freight train north and one south from Palestine, but it is not likely they can proceed far after this protection leaves them. Merchants at all points affected by the strike are complaining bitterly at the company for having reduced the pay of employes, as the business community can not get their stock of goods now en route from eastern markets. The potato planting time is near at hand, and there are no seed potatoes in the markets, but thousands of bushels on the way to Texas. If the strike is a prolonged one, as now indicated, the farmers will not be able to put in any potato crop. The strikers say they are determined to hold out, and not accept any reduction, so that Jay Gould may make up from their labor his losses in Wall street stock gambling. All points report everything quiet and orderly, and no apprehension of disturbances.

LONGVIEW, Tex., March 7.—A heavy freight train, which was slipped out of Palestine Friday, bound north, under guard of the local officers of that place, arrived here in the evening. The strikers, by some unknown means, had knowledge of its coming, and had gathered at the depot in large force. The train was forcibly captured, engine detached and side-tracked, where her fires were extinguished and the water drawn from the boiler. The other freight trains which left Palestine will be treated likewise on arrival. The strikers maintain good order and strict discipline in their ranks. Details are watching for trains and constantly guarding the company's property.

DENISON, Tex., March 7.—About 300 employes at the Mopac shops struck at 10 o'clock Friday morning. Eleven engines have been removed from here for safety. Two yard engines, which had been shipping cars to moguls awaiting across the river to take them north, were seized, put in the round-house, and locked up by the strikers, Friday evening. Everything is very quiet. The strikers have placed guards over the company's property, and will allow no one

—Rev. A. J. VanWagner, the new pastor of the Congregational church, preached two able sermons in his church yesterday morning and evening, and was listened to by large congregations. His morning theme being "A pastor's talk to his people," in which he dwelt upon the relations of pastor and people, and spoke plainly of the duties of one to the other. He is a pleasant talker, ripe scholar, and a man full of enthusiasm and earnestness in the work of his Master.

—The board of school commissioners held a regular meeting on Saturday evening, at which all the members were present except Commissioner Ruger. The clerk was authorized to ascertain the amount of coal required to keep the furnaces going the remainder of the winter, and purchase the same; Supt. Burton reported in favor of teaching the German language in the high school: seven ballots were taken for janitor in the fifth ward school, each resulting in a tie vote for Mr. M. Hickey and Mr. John J. VanKirk. A little routine business transacted and the board adjourned.

—A large number of people assembled at the building in the rear of the Phœbus block, used by the electric light company, on Saturday evening, to witness the public test of the electric lamps. It was given out that this test would take place at 7:30 o'clock, but owing to some hitch in the machinery, it was after nine o'clock when the illumination took place and the many persons who had collected to see it, had returned to their homes. Some thirty-five or forty lamps were lighted, and of course the little room was as light as day. The lamps will be placed in the stores to-day, and those subscribing will have a chance this evening of judging of the power and economy of this illuminator. Some of the objections to the electric light as produced here on a former trial, are remedied in this, while others remain. Time alone will demonstrate its superiority to other illuminators.

The pain and sorrow of a morning were turned into the comfort and pleasure of an evening, in the case of Mr. Edwin Sears, of Provincetown, Mass, by the use of Athlophoros. He writes: "I was troubled with rheumatism so much that I resolved to try Athlophoros. In the morning I could not walk across the room alone. After taking three doses I was almost free from pain, and could walk as well as ever."

CITY POLITICS.

Very Little Agitation or Strife for the Spoils or Office.

Four weeks from to-morrow the municipal election takes place, and yet but very little attention is paid to the canvass. For mayor we have heard the names of four prominent republicans mentioned, either of whom could be elected, and would do honor to the position. They are Ex-Mayors Hiram Merrill and A. P. Lovejoy, Hon. Fenner Kimball, and C. L. Valentine. For clerk there appears to be no opposition to the nomination of the present efficient clerk, Mr. C. E. Church, and he will no doubt be nominated and elected by the usual flattering majority given to a faithful, competent and popular official. The treasurership seems to be overlooked, and no candidate appears on the surface. For street commissioner we hear the names of John Brown, S. B. Kenyon and M. H. Curtis, any of whom would make an excellent guardian of the streets. Undoubtedly there will be two school commissioners to elect on the general city ticket, an amendment to our city charter creating these offices, now pending in the legislature. A school commissioner will be elected in the first and third wards, and no doubt the present incumbents, Messrs. C. E. Bowles and Wm. Ruger, will be retained.

The aldermen whose terms expire, are first ward—C. A. Potter; second ward—S. B. Kenyon; third ward—M. C. Smith; fourth ward—W. G. Palmer; fifth ward—J. B. McLean—all republicans except Alds. Smith and McLean. Ald. Kenyon refuses to be a candidate for reelection, preferring to take his chances for the office of street commissioner. The aldermanic candidates do not materialize very rapidly, many anxious ones waiting to see what action the legislature will take on the high license question.

The democrats are just now looking to the post office, and are doing very little canvassing for the municipal loaves and fishes, preferring to rest until further developments. Aside from the announcement of the candidacy of J. O'Brien, Jr., and John R. Ryan, for street commissioner, the democrats have not developed any candidates. There is room for missionary workers during the next two or three weeks.

P. S. The fact that an amendment to the city charter is now pending, giving the council the power to elect the street commissioners, will no doubt make considerable difference with the above candidates.

Who of us are without our troubles, be they small or large? The blessings of health are best appreciated when we are sick and in pain. A hacking cough a severe cold, or any throat or lung disease are very troublesome: but all these may be quickly and permanently cured by Dr. Bigelow's Positive Cure: Safe and pleasant for children. Price 50 cents. Trial size free. Sold by Stearns and Baker

Prentice & Evenson, opposite postoffice, sell Athlophoros.

Personal.

—Mrs. George Galbraith, of Algona, Iowa, is the guest of the family of Mr. John Galbraith, Milton avenue.

—Mrs. W. E. Fuller started to-day for Dubuque, Iowa, where she joins her husband, who is now connected with a shoe factory in that city.

—Postoffice Inspector J. D. King arrived home from Washington yesterday afternoon, and left this afternoon for Boscobel, on official business.

—Mrs. Lucius Lee and little son Eddie, of the third ward, started this morning for Milwaukee, Kenosha and Salem, to visit friends. They will be absent a week or two.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Van Smith, recently of Houston, Texas, are in the city visiting Mrs. Van Smith's mother, Mrs. Jane Hills, Benton avenue, second ward. Mr. Van Smith was until recently the assistant superintendent of the Galveston, Harrisburg and San Antonio railroad. They will reside in Chicago, whither they go in a day or two.

Our Charter Amendment.

We learn from Assemblyman Norcross, who was in the city to-day, that the amendment to our city charter has passed the assembly and is now in the hands of the committee on enrolled bills. This amendment provides that the city officers shall be elected for two years; increases the school board by adding two school commissioners at large, and provides that the street commissioner shall be elected by the common council. This last amendment is a surprise to many, as nothing had been said publicly relating to such a clause in the bill now pending. Captain Norcross is not disposed to crowd this last clause, and desires all who are opposed to such a change to speak out; should there be a general opposition to the common council having this power, he will recall the bill.

Those favoring this change claim that the aldermen, by law, are held responsible for the condition of the public streets of the city, and therefore should have the selection of the commissioner. There is some opposition to the change, but to what extent, we are unable to state. The opposition may not extend any farther than the objection to surrendering the right of franchise.

The Weather

At seven o'clock yesterday morning the thermometer registered 3 degrees above zero. Clear, with north wind. At one o'clock p. m. the register was 39 degrees above zero. Partly cloudy with northwest wind. For the corresponding hours last year the register was 14 and 30 degrees above zero. At seven o'clock this morning the thermometer indicated 25 degrees above zero. Partly cloudy with north wind. At one o'clock p. m. the register was 45 degrees above zero. Clear with west wind. For the corresponding hours one year ago the register was 6 and 28 degrees above zero.

THE BRIGHT SIDE.

The Lecture of the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage on Saturday Night.

The Rev. Thomas DeWitt Talmage, the well known pastor of the Brooklyn Tabernacle, delivered a lecture on the "Bright side of things," at the Congregational church on Saturday evening. The audience was comparatively small, the attendance probably reaching four hundred. While the majority in the audience were well pleased with Mr. Talmage there were not a few who were disappointed. They expected to witness outbursts of eloquence, to hear the well trained voice and to see the polished gestures of an accomplished orator, but in this they were defeated. Mr. Talmage is not an eloquent man. His reputation has been gained in the realm of sensationalism. He told his hearers on Saturday night that he used to try to deliver profound lectures but abandoned them, and took up something lighter, more practical and more in keeping with the demands of the masses of the people. In many respects Mr. Talmage is not a pleasant speaker. His pronounciation is often times very careless, his gestures awkward, and the habit of closing many of his sentences with a rising inflection, when the contrary should be the rule, is anything but pleasing. Had the same lecture been delivered by a person other than T. DeWitt Talmage, it would not have been regarded as commercially worth seventy-five cents per head.

But to the chief point. The subject was a good one. There was probably not a person present who did not hear something from which he could draw some benefit. It was full of practical hints, pleasing illustrations telling witticisms, and spice was abundant enough to keep the audience in constant good cheer. His finest effort during the delivery of the lecture was the description of the burning of the Smithsonian institute, on the 25th of January, 1865. It was an admirable piece of word painting and was heartily appreciated. But in no other part of the lecture was there anything approaching fine oratory or captivating eloquence. He is original, off-hand, blunt, and quite alone in his gestures, for on the American platform there is none other like him. These have made him notorious if not famous. As he is on the platform, so he is in the pulpit. His individuality is as clearly marked in one place as in another, and hence Mr. Talmage is known everywhere, but everywhere is not popular and does not draw equal to the more eloquent lecturers.

As a rule, his lectures have little or no literary merit, are devoid of oratorical finish, and our readers will agree that they should not fetch, commercially or otherwise, $250 for each delivery.

Mr. Talmage was introduced to the audience in a very neat and flattering manner, by the Rev. Mr. VanWagner, the new pastor of the Congregational church.

Municipal Court.

Last evening Marshal Hogan arrested one John Johnson, and to day he was taken into court on charge of vagrancy, found guilty and sentenced to the county jail for thirty days. This man Johnson is the individual brought up from Clinton about two years ago, on charge of vagrancy, and an attempt was then made to send him to Waupun under the new law, but the jury failed to convict. Then he was in the habit of going from house to house seeking aid for some unknown widow who had been burned out of house and home. He was at the same business in this city when the marshal arrested him.

Marshal Hogan brought in one drunk this morning, and the court sentenced him to the county jail for three days.

One drunk and one tramp were discharged.

Officer Smith, last evening arrested Richard Barry, on charge of breaking into a car belonging to the St. Paul road. The case had not been disposed of at three o'clock this afternoon.

This morning the case of the state against Dr. Normington was called. The defendant not being ready for the examination, on motion of her attorney an adjournment was taken until next Monday morning. District Attorney Malone appearing for the state and John W. Sale and Wm. Ruger for the defendant.

THE WIDOW'S PALACE.

MRS. MARK HOPKINS AND HER NEW HOUSE AT GREAT BARRINGTON.

The Possessor of $30,000,000—Leaving a Million Dollar Residence in California to Live in a Finer One in Massachusetts.

[New York World.]

A paragraph was published some days ago in which it was said that Mrs. Mark Hopkins, of California, had determined to build a $5,000,000 residence at Great Barrington, Mass. Previous to that the Boston papers had published the report that the house was to cost only one-fifth that sum and the third and last report is that the amount to be expended is only $500,000. It is true, indeed, that Mrs. Hopkins is going to build a residence at Great Barrington. It is furthermore true that it is to be a very expensive one—the most expensive probably in Massachusetts, or even New England. It will not cost so much as $5,000,000, but it will cost more than $1,000,000. The plans are completed and have been accepted. They now rest in the hands of New York architects and will not be made public for some time. Work on the foundation of the building will be commenced the coming spring and Mrs. Hopkins expects to see it ready for occupancy three years hence.

There is some interesting history woven in and about the life of Mrs. Mark Hopkins. She is the widow of Mark Hopkins who was one of the five men of California who built the Central Pacific railroad and made each a princely fortune out of it. The others were Leland Stanford, C. P. Huntington, and the two Crockers. Hopkins was the treasurer of the company from its organization in 1861 or thereabout, till his death in 1878. He left an estate that was inventoried at $21,703,000.

He died without having made a will and without children. By the common laws Mrs. Hopkins would have been entitled to only one-third of the immense estate. The courts made her the executrix, and she took possession, but the two brothers of her deceased husband, Moses and Samuel, or rather Moses and the sons of Samuel, for the latter had died, brought a suit against her and secured her removal from the executorship of the estate, and an accounting of it. The matter was finally compromised, Moses Hopkins and the sons of Samuel Hopkins being content to receive together some $4,000,000 in hard cash. Mrs. Hopkins got the remainder, which, as already stated, now amounts to about $30,000,000. Thus do we come to know who Mrs. Mark Hopkins is and how she became so rich.

Before Mark Hopkins died he built the first of those palatial residences that have since excited the wonder and admiration of all who have in the past ten years visited the city of San Francisco. It was constructed of wood, like all the others of its class, but had about it all the elaborateness and extravagance of some of the finest English country houses. It was said to have cost $1,000,000, and at that time the Stewart residence in New York city was the only dwelling-house in America that had cost that sum. It was the Hopkins mansion that made Knob Hill the fashionable quarter of San Francisco. All have heard of the splendid residences that Governor Stanford, James Flood and other California millionaires have since built there. Since her husband's death Mrs. Hopkins has purchased Menlo park, Ralston's famous country place, and there she has settled her adopted son James, a young man of 26, who recently married a Miss Crittenden, of California, a niece of Mrs. Hopkins.

Notwithstanding all these large possessions, not to speak of others on the Pacific slope, Mrs. Hopkins proposes to make her home in her husband's native town of Great Barrington, Mass. She has always had an affection for the place and comes there because its people and surroundings are congenial to their tastes. During recent years Mrs. Hopkins has come here to spend her summer. It was there that she lived when a young girl, and there that she was married. When she grew rich she added the porticoes, put colored glass in some of the windows and furnished it luxuriantly. The carpets in every room are as soft as down, the chairs are of antique mahogany upholstered in yellow silk, plush. Every bit of pottery, every piece of bronze, every foot-stool, every sofa, lounge, chair, stand, vase or whatever it may be, bears evidence of having been selected with cultivated taste.

The new dwelling that is to supplant the old will be 178 by 148 feet and will be built of blue dolomite. It is a very hard stone, of finer grain than granite, and is obtained from a neighboring quarry owned by Mrs. Hopkins herself. The exterior walls are to show the stone in rough surface with cut seams. The stables and the coachman's cottage are already built. They are of the same dolomite to be employed in the construction of the residence and look as though they would endure through all the ages to come. I cannot give a description of the residence for the excellent reason that I have not seen the drawings.

The ground upon which Mrs. Hopkins is to build her castle extends a hundred yards along the principal street, and back of it, to the south a little, is a level meadow valley that runs off along the shore of the Housatonic and to the foot of the picturesque Berkshire hills on the other side. In the midst of this smooth meadow field is an artificial basin in which is a fountain from which in summer springs a stream of water nearly a hundred feet into the air and comes down in a mist that is as soft as a silken veil.

Mrs. Hopkins is a woman of great strength of character. She is well fitted to care for the vast estate left her. Both in appearance and in mental characteristics she is strongly masculine. She is of commanding appearance, and one is always made to feel, when in her presence, that she has the unmistakable elements of superiority. She is thoroughly acquainted with all the ways of business, has a broad grasp of financial questions, looks after her vast interests with the closest minuteness, and drives a bargain with tact and economy. Her husband was passionately fond of horses; so is she. Her stable at Great Barrington is one of the completest and most comfortable in the country. Its inmates are of the finest breeding and movement, and are looked after by their colored master with the greatest care. During her visits to Great Barrington Mrs. Hopkins may be seen on the afternoon of every fair day driving out behind a pair of fine trotters, she herself holding the reins. She makes long excursions about the surrounding country, and every inhabitant, young or old, knows her. She is the great woman of Great Barrington.
